

Northfields Community Library

Lettings Policy

How we use our premises is important to supporting our mission at Northfields Community Library (NCL). Our vision is to create a vibrant and welcoming library that provides a place for everyone, recognising the diversity of the local community, particularly in terms of age and ethnicity.

Our mission is to create more reasons for residents to visit the library regularly – for reading, for study, as social space, and to learn new skills.

To develop and extend use of the premises we can offer space to local organisations for mutually beneficial projects on a partnership basis, without charge, during library opening hours.

In addition, organisations can hire space in the library as follows:

During opening hours:

private office space for confidential interviews or small meetings. This is especially useful if organisations would like clients to meet them in a neutral, public space

Out of opening hours:

space for a small group activity using tables and chairs within the existing furniture layout;
or opening a larger space by moving bookshelves and other furniture

The library is not available for hire by individuals, for personal use or purely social events. Furthermore, the terms of our lease do not allow us to hire the space to religious or political organisations. All organisations hiring the library must have appropriate public liability insurance.

The organisation must identify a representative who will sign the Premises Hiring Agreement and accept full responsibility for observing in all respects the Terms and Conditions set out in the signed agreement. The representative must be 18 years of age or over and will be responsible for ensuring that the event complies with all legal requirements including, though not exclusively, copyright, food safety and safeguarding.

When the library is hired out of opening hours, our partnership with Ealing Libraries means that a steward from the Community Library team must be present to host activities and to open and close the premises. Where volunteer stewards are not available this may incur an additional charge. While we welcome all local groups without discrimination, the Trustees reserve the right to refuse to hire the library if no suitable person can be found to open and close the premises or if they have any concerns about a letting interfering with the smooth running of the library or disturbing the local community.

Hirers are expected to respect the building and its contents ensuring these are left in the condition in which they are found. Failure to do this will normally incur a financial charge to cover the cost of any necessary repair or cleaning.
